Re-Dividing the Cake

THE PUBLIC POSTURES OF provincial governments are very different, fortunately, from their attitudes as they sit down privately to discuss their business with the federal government.

When they met recently to consider Mr. Pearson's municipal loan scheme it was freely predicted that they would reach no agreement, Premier Lesage would upset the applecart and that Mr. Pearscn's political enemies would pick up the apples.

Nothing of the sort occurred. Instead, agreement was unanimous, after the Prime Minister had modified his plans in detail to suit the provinces

This spirit of co-operation, one hopes, will mark a far more important conference of the eleven governments in November. That meeting will consider not only a new federal system of old age pensions but a re-division of revenue fields between the national and provincial administrations. The financial system of Confederation will be under

Certainly it requires reviewnot just its details but its whole

Until a month or two ago all our governments were operating on certain assumptions. The federal budget undermined them all. For its figures showed that the national treasury, its deficits as large as ever despite substantial tax creases, simply cannot afford to give the provinces the extra revenues that their governments confidently expected.

Mr. Gordon already has warned the provinces of that fact, especially the province of Quebec which is proposing a huge new drain on federal revenues. Mr. Gordon is quite right but it will not be enough for the federal government to freeze the existing situation because it is increasingly unsatisfactory to

On the one hand, the national treasury is in a grave condition, obviously intends to increase taxes still further, has already undertaken enormous subsidies of one sort or another to the provinces and therefore increasingly demands the right to supervise these expendi-

On the other hand, most of the provinces are in deficit, too (British Columbia being a remarkable exception), want more money and resent any federal interference in their local affairs. Quebec's demand for more autonomy is only one aspect of this many-sided problem.

The present federal-provincial argument, like so many other difficulties in Canada, arises out of many false assumptions, chiefly the assumption that the nation's wealth would grow as fast as the state's demands on it. This it has failed to do. The state's appetite, at three levels of government, has exceeded its total means—or at least the public's willingness to pay taxesjust as the nation's total consumphas exceeded its production and has been financed by foreign debt

All governments, federal, provincial and municipal, will have to reconsider their spending plans and the capacity of their taxpayers to carry them. But the federal government and the provinces will have to reconsider also the division of their responsibilities.

Clearly the federal government has assumed many responsibilities which the constitution intended to place on the shoulders of the provinces. Clearly the provincial gov-ernments have escaped in large measure the responsibility of collecting directly from their people the money that they spend locally and have unloaded this unpopular task on Ottawa.

Nevertheless, if the provinces are to fulfill their responsibilities they must have adequate revenue sources without duplicating, if they can avoid it, the taxes of the federal government.

any federal system but in Canada prosperous world. they have reached a point where no small change of detail will serve, where the entire field of federal and provincial responsibility will have to be re-explored. The reexploration should begin at the November meeting as a grand assize on the nation's finances.

There is speculation that the invaders of the demilitarized strip set up by the truce are trying to capture an American prisoner. But the risk of much greater than the advantage to be derived from such a move.

It is fairly certain that North Korea would not take such a serious step as to break the truce without Red Chinese sanction or instructions. And it could be that Peking, looking for a way to save face after the sharp diplomatic setback suffered in Moscow a few days ago, is stirring the Korean war waters as a demonstration of contempt for the Americans.

But American tempers may prove short in this case. United States soldiers have been shot at and killed in defiance of an agreed and long-standing truce. The North Koreans have produced so insulting an explanation as to charge that the Americans killed their own solby blaming the North Koreans.

It is surprising that the old automobile record of 394 miles per hour, set by the British driver John Cobb, had stood for sixteen years. That is a long time for such a mark to remain unchanged in this era when science has made such tremendous strides in moving people and things from one spot to another at high cal, has been successfully challenged since 1947: this one somehow had stuck.

Itching to Swing the Political Club

THE Pearson government admits, with refreshing candor, that unemployment in Canada probably will be higher next winter than it was a year ago. No doubt this is true. When the problem worsens the government will say that it cannot be fairly blamed. This also will be true. But what our political parties have said about the causes of unemployment, and about each other, for the last 90 years has not usually been true.

Of all our political myths the most popular, persistent and false is that the existing government must be responsible for high or low employment, for good times or bad. The attack shortly to be launched on Mr. Pearson for failing to produce full employment was successfully launched against eleven of his predeces-Only Laurier and Mr. St. Laurent escaped it (and even Mr. St. Laurent did not escape it altogether at the end) cause they happened to govern during These problems are inherent in good times spilling into Canada from a Unemployment, always misunderstood, misrepresented and used by all parties as the Neanderfhal club of politics, killed its first victim in the seventies of the last century. The Liberal government of Alexander Mackenzie perished in a world de-pression which Sir John A. Macdonald gleefully construed as a local Canadian phenonmenon. The Liberals, by their insanely low tariffs, had ruined the country that was the beginning of the Conservative myth.

Policy Failed

Macdonald's National Policy, could not revent the next world depression and therefore had failed—that was the beginning of the Liberal myth. It was strong enough, combined with other elements, diers in order to create an incident like the Manitoba School Question, to destroy Macdonald's successors and the Obviously there is deliberate golden years of Laurier seemed to con-procation here. It was not Mr. Diefenbaker but an immense complex of economic distortions and technical changes far beyond his comprehension that produced the new phenomenon of recent times — simultaneously high unemployment and high prosperity. And it is not Mr. Pearson's fault that the same phenomenon afflicts us today as it will afflict us for a long time to come.

By a rough sort of jungle justice the old club is invariably turned on the party which wields it. Over and over again oppositions attack governments because nes are bad, promise to usher in the affluent society and, on taking office, are themselves attacked for failing to do the impossible. Neither party has any right to complain. Both have wielded the club without mercy. Both have fallen under its

Our historians realized long ago that good times and bad in Canada have moved by a regular cycle with the business climate of the world, not entirely but almost outside Canada's control. A graph of our history would show the lines of the world's prosperity and Canada's moving in parallel while our politicians were either taking credit for a boom or denying responsibility for a bust, though in fact they had about as much to do with it as the barometer has to do with storm or are old and mature enough now to aban-don that childish toy, the double myth of politics, and accept the fact that no government can separate us from the affairs of mankind as the unfortunate Mr. Bennett tried to do.

Perhaps we can even face the next and most obvious fact of our time—that unample employment in Canada today is largely caused by our attempt to enforce a separate live beyond our means by to economists in clover.

There are plenty of bright young econo mists, of course, to assure Mr. Pearson that he has only to push the right lever Under the and he can cure the problem overnight. Possibly he used to believe them. If so, he must be disenchanted by this time when he finds unemployment climbing after he hoped to reduce it, and Mr. Diefenbaker eagerly fingering the club again.

Difficult Process

To mesh the Canadian economy, its wages, costs and prices, with those of the world, and to manage, at home, the technical revolution which goes by the name of automation, must be a long and difficult process, very different from its crude political parody and next winter's predictable unemployment debate in Parliament,

It is easy for Conservatives to say that things would have been worse if the Diefenbaker government had not spent the nation into financial disorder (a major cause of unemployment). It will be tempting for the Pearson government to say that this experiment failed only because

Prime Minister Pearson in his promise to have the question of a national flag settled within two years has committed himself to an undertaking which I fear he will find it very difficult to fulfill.

I have said before and I repeat it now that in my opinion we shall never have a representative national flag so long as we insist on keeping the Union Jack upon it. Why? The reason is simple. Just use the old admonition "Put yourself in his place." Then just imagine that well over two hundred years ago thousands of British settlers had poured into the valley of the St. Lawrence with pain and labor and hewed out their farms and built their homes. Then along came a French army, seized the territory by force and waved a conquering flag over their heads. Would

IN ALMOST every sense the fuss over our chicken exports to Western Europe looks like a misfortune. It is so easy to

The issue was not forced by Mr. Herter or the State Department or Senator Fulbright or any other Senator from the 22 states interested in these chicken exports. The Common Market created the problem. It refused to budge even though the United States tried for many months to avoid a public challenge. That is the origin of the present trouble

The Common Market has nearly tripled its charges on American chickens. They have risen from 4½ cents to 13 cents a pound. No trade can flourish under this discrimination. Exports have fallen from about 50 million dollars to about 15 million dollars. In another year, under these conditions, the trade will be

It is no exaggeration to say that all American agriculture has an interest in the outcome of this apparently trivial dispute. So indeed has every branch of the American economy. For a severe shrinkage in farm exports to Europe would cause new burdens on our balance of payments. Jean Lesage's purpose in monkey-wrenching the plans of his erstwhile Liberal colleagues at Ottawa is less idealistic. Primarily Lesage wants money, lots of it, for economic ends, and for a political end as well: to aggrandize the provincial authority at the ex-

Although this political purpose has not been announced as official Quebec government policy, it can be deduced from the attitudes, statements and actions of Lesage and his ministers, notably Resources Minister Rene Levesque. It is a purpose that, if unchecked, would ultimately make the parts of Canada stronger than the whole, and substitute a Balkanized federation for the concept of one nation from sea to sea.

Prime Minister Pearson recognizes this danger. He has no intentions of allowing the federal authority to be seriously weakened. At the same time he recognizes that he must compromise on questions that are not vital to the strength of the federal authority—as he did on the question of federal loans to municipalities. He must compromise for the sake of national unity, to assure the maximum of provincial co-operation, and he must compromise for political reasons, With the Pearson government lacking a Commons majority, and depending largely on Quebec votes for support, Premier Lesage is in a strong position to force his will on Ottawa That is what Lesage is trying to do with to opt out of Ottawa's universal contributory pension plan. Lesage's intention is to set up a provincial pension plan that would require all employees in Quebec to contribute pension premiums to the Quebec treasury. This is a plan recommended to him not by his pro-vincial welfare authorities, but by his provincial economic counsellors. It would give his government huge sums of money that would use for economic purposes, in lieu money that he might obtain by raising taxes or selling bonds.

The Quebec plan, which smacks of the federal government's compulsory savings program in World War II, would likely drive the insurance companies out of the pension field in Quebec. Pensions would become a state onopoly, like liquor. From the contributors' point of view it would not be as good as the federal plan. Quebec proposes a funded plan, and contributors would have to pay premiums for from 25 to 40 years to build up equity entitlement to full pensions. The federal plan is a non-funded pay-as-we-go proposition, with full benefits payable in 10 years out of the current revenues. Under the federal plan, those working and contributing would be paying the pensions of those who had retired.

Lesage has threatened to put a provincial scheme into operation, slap-dash if necessary to beat Ottawa to the punch, and then dare Ottawa to impose its plan and its com-pulsory pay cheque deductions on top of his. He has Ottawa over a barrel.

I lay out the route and she does the packing, takes the cat to the boarding kennel, stops the milk and paper, arranges to have the mail forwarded, finds someone to water the flowers, gets the car serviced, notifies the relatives that we will be dropping in on them, and floats a loan at the bank.

SPORTS DIARY

By SHIRLEY POVICH (The Washington Post)

CARLISLE, Pa. - The owners of the Washington Redskins do not have a mind like a steel trap. It whirs and snaps with the speed of a rusty gate. It took them 27 years to think up the bright idea that the Redskins should train at Carlisle, Pa., where at last they have trekked. It would seem that only career dimwits could have been so long unaware of the proper place for proper pursuits.

Carlisle, Pa., is the natural habitat of Indians desiring to play good football. Even for pseudo Injuns like the Redskins, who are trying to learn, the place beckons. At least, at Carlisle, something might rub off. The shades of Jim Thorpe and Frank Mt. Pleasant, and Joe Guyon and Al Exendine and Lone Wolf, and the lingering image of how they played the game should be inspiring.

Jim Thorpe was the greatest of these, but the Carlisle Indian School had been playing football for more than ten years before he got there in 1907 and was already beating Harvard, Yale and Penn. Pop Warner arrived in 1895 and then it was that the football world began to hear of the little Indian school in Pennsylvania.

There were only 250 students at Carlisle, culled mostly from the more promising lads on the western Indian reservations. Their fathers had only lately put away the bows and arrows and the muskets they could cadge for the wars against the white man, and now is was time to get some

They Also Had Thorpe, the Sioux

The western movie hadn't been invented, with the film-makers still experimenting with their herky-jerky gelatin product, so the Indians hadn't been getting the worst of it even in the nickelodeons. But as coach Warner wrote in The Saturday Evening Post many years ago, "Carlisle had no traditions, but what the young Indians did have was a very real race pride.

They wanted to show the palefaces what the Indians could do when the odds were even. It was not that they felt any bitterness against the conquering whites, but rather that they believed the contest between redmen and white men had never been waged on equal terms. For 15 years little Carlisle took the measure of almost every big university with student bodies of 4,000 to 5,000 to draw from."

For too many years, the Washington Redskins have not been waging their battles with the enemy in the National Football League on equal terms, it may be noted. Equality for the Redskins usually ceased with the opening whistle, Like the Carlisle Indians, they were out-depthed. But War-ner's Indians were inventive. Also they had Thorpe, the

Each Indian Was Complete Player

Carlisle wasn't supposed to beat the good Columbia m that day in New York in 1900. Columbia's baffled bully boys had reason to wonder if they had been hit by a raid of a wagon train, so fast did the Indians gyrate. It was Warner's invention, the shift. Carlisle linemen leaped and whirled laterally before the snap-back, emitting Indian yells in glee to leave Columbia so confused the final score

In his Indian wards, Warner found a special virtue. Everyone was the whole football player who wanted to run, pass, kick, block and tackle. Every man in his backfield was a dropkicker." The forward pass had just been permitted by the new rules in 1907. How the Indians did

"Light on their feet as professional dancers and every-one amazingly skillful with his hands, the Redskins pirouetted in and out until the pass receiver, was well down the field and then they shot the ball like a bullet. Poor Penn, the first to experience Carlisle's passing attack, finally reached a point where its players merely ran around in circles, emitting wild yawps."

Desire to Win Is Still in Style

The Carlisle Indians were comparative scantlings, even the great Thorpe weighing only 175 pounds, "but the fury of their attack tore heavier lines to shreds, and their tackling had the force of a catapult. Trick plays, however, were what the Indians liked best. Nothing delighted them more than to outsmart the palefaces."

It was in 1903 that Harvard learned how Custer must have felt at Little Big Horn. The Crimson kicked off to the Carlisle one-yard line that day and never saw the ball again until it was touchdown, Indians, Harvard tacklers could find neither ball nor ball-carrier. Dillon of Carlisle strolled 99 yards with it unseen after quarterback Jimmy Johnston took the kick and in the protection of a V-wedge formed by his conspirators, tucked the ball under Dillon's

The hidden-ball trick is out, and there is no pla football for the old shifts, but the Washington Redskins nevertheless are not forbidden other tricks in the image of the Carlisle Indians.

And their sojourn at Carlisle could remind them that speed, lots of courage, and a continual raging desire to win football games has not yet gone out of style.

OTTAWA (UPI)-The government has decided to pro-ceed with plans to construct a memorial building and national cenotaph to Canada's war dead on Nepean Point in the capital, it was announced

A joint statement by Works
Minister Jean-Paul Deschatelets and Veterans Affairs Mini-ster Roger Teillet said it was hoped to have the $1.5 million project completed in time for ing as part of the nation's centennial celebrations

The cruciform-shaped memorial building will provide central accommodation for books of remembrance containing the names of nearly 113,000 Canadians who died in wars in which Canada participated.

The new national cenotaph, first proposed by the Canadian Legion eight years ago, is ex-pected to replace the First World War monument in Confederation Square as the focal point for national commemorative services. Like the building, it will be a general memorial not identified with any one war.

Clinic Q.: "The recent scare about tuna fish and botulism food poisoning has me worried about my cat. I feed her tuna fish. Are cats subject to this poisoning?"

Missoula, Mont. Miss C. H. C.,

A. Yes, all pets can be affected by poisoned food. However, put your worries at rest. The recent tuna scare was an isolated and rare incident. By the way, it may be of interest to know that it was a veterinarian, Dr. Karl Meyer, who solved mystery of botulism food poisoning and helped pave the way for our tremendous modern food canning industry.

Clinic: Q. "I have a male cat, 21/2 years old. He has just begun to wet on every-thing inside and outside the What is the reason for this? I notice that he's paying a lot of attention to a female cat near here. Could this be the cause?"

Mrs. F. B., Glace Bay, N.S.

A. Yes, the nearby female very likely is the cause of your cat's actions. He's behaving very much like a male who has the mating urge. Of course, there's always the possibility that the excessive wetting is a urinary problem. I suggest that you allow nature to take its course for a while. Then, if the wetting problem doesn't solve itself, have your cat did it. An impressive gallonage of coffee has gone down my throat since I was sparkchaser for that highball outfit. I have drawn it—like the curious stuff in a paper cup beside me now - from soulless machines that kick it out for a dime.

In sun or rain, over beach fires and in electric percolators, I have stewed, dripped, percolated and infused many cup of what I regarded as good coffee.

But when I saw that pic-Old Chum labels on their aides, I knew I'd been kidding myself. What I've been drinking isn't the stuff you break records on; it's just coffee, not the drink of heroes that emerged, on the end of a slice bar, from the firebox of Side Two.

The day we broke the camp loading record started out like any other. Along toward mid-morning, though, a key-log let go in the colddeck pile we were transfer-ring to skeleton cars on the railway spur, and with a growl and a rumble, the pile began to slide.

Keep-the-Peace George, our portly Swedish hooktender, happened to be up there. His descent was spectacular—a series of squirrel bounds down the face of the pile, and a final gallop into the clear with a 40-foot stick cartwheeling after him.

Pretty good for an old man," somebody observed; a emark that George ignored. But the work tempo began quicken. It was soon plain that our hooktender meant to wipe out the affront to his dignity by getting that particular bunch of logs yarded and loaded at a high-would play the hand, 1 also pointed, out that there was a double dummy play to make the contract. If an expert is given this as a problem hand he reasons that West must hold the king of clubs, otherwise could make 12 tricks

It is also apparent that West does not hold the ace and king of spades because if he did he would have led them right out. trump tricks, two dia-monds and a club in top cards for 10 tricks and can get to 11 by finessing

Opening lead- V 6 Some sort of squeeze and end play is indicated. South plays two rounds of trumps and the ace and king of diamonds. He ruifs a dimond, goes back to dummy with its last trump, ruffs the last diamond and leads out all his trumps at which point if the opponents have discarded to best ability the last cards are:

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

You've heard the nursery rhyme which read: cut out and Mr. Magee's questions inserted from "There was a little girl, who had a little curl . . . the studio instead. tata . . . tata." It ended with the lines: The end result had the viewer subjected to tata . . . tata tata. It ended was good, she was very, very good but when she was The latter lines could be applied to CBC TV on occasion. When the network does something good, it's hard to beat. But the reverse holds true, too.

The case in point was the hour-long look at the Canadian football scene Sunday. The program, The Coaches Speak, was so slip-shod in make-up, content and presentation, it should cause questions to be asked within the program department, Early this year, Hal Kelly and Steve Douglas toured big league baseball spring training camps in Florida and turned up an hour which, lacking in new technique, proved quite enjoyable and interesting to the sports fan. Sunday's creation was an attempt at the same type of format excluding Kelly and Douglas, but written and narrated by Michael Magee. I'm not familiar with his sports credentials except he emceed a late night wrestling forum several years ago out of Vancouver.

Stephen

The interviews were carried out at the training camps of the teams of the Canadian Football League. There is nothing wrong with this approach except the questions of the interviewer, in each case, were

The end result had the viewer subjected to sound quality as different as black and white. There was very little football action shown even though the exhibition games had been completed in plenty of time for the program. Players seen at the training camps were not identified. In fact, the only player easily recognized, without a program or help from the narrator, was Jackie Parker.

To top it off, Mr. Magee's narration lacked so much color and was delivered in such a "wish-I-were-million miles away" expected it is the total total total and the state of the such a "wish-I-were-million miles away" expected it is the total to a-million-miles-away" approach, it left the viewer in omplete state of torpor.

The over-all program lacked imagination and a waste of an hour of good time after a promising buildup during the prior day's baseball game.

The Show of the Week documentary "Emergency Ward" was a dramatic piece of business. The show was about the experiences of Dr. Martein Mulder, an intern at New York's Bellevue Hospital. He and other doctors used the resources of modern medicine to keep alive the injured and diseased. It was stark drama because it was live as seen through hidden cameras placed in the hospital's key areas.

The Show's documentaries are becoming rich in human interest and as popular as the weekly dramas. The last documentary followed a big city detective on his rounds in a bustling city. The late Sunday night period is about the last refuge for original drama until the new season unfolds the new offerings in the fall ings in the fall.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months,

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

serves to protect the pegged rate on the Canadian dollar. The pressure stemmed from the prospect that less Amer ican capital would be entering Canada to offset Canada's balance-of-payments deficit current transactions. Mr. Gordon's statement said the greater part of the decline in reserves occurred July 18 and 19 just before the U.S. announcement that it would ex-empt new Canadian bond and stock issues from the proposed tax. The exemption would be accorded on the undertaking that Canada would not take ad-vantage of the concession to build up its foreign exchange reserves. In essence, the Canadian undertaking amounts to an agreement not to increase the country's exchange reserves.
